

482-750

Franks in Gaul
(MEROVINGIAN Dynasty)

482

Freed from his most dangerous enemies
and rivals, in 482, Theodoric, (son of Thius.)
began an offensive against Greece in the course of which he advanced as far as LARISSA.

Emperor Zeno decided to try conciliation
and on the advice of Acacius, patriarch of Constantinople, issued the so-called "Henotikon," which, while condemning Nestorius and Eutyches, equated the definitions of Chalcedon and accepted
the doctrine of Cyril of Alexandria.
This document only poured oil on the flames. Angry correspondence

Johnston, James & Co. (London), which entered with Pope's First communicating Accusation and though Accusation died in 1789, the present
only ended in the death of the original Accusation in 1790 - June 1790. later.

482

Zeno's Hereticon; breach
with Roman church.

482

Christians are persecuted in Italy
by Vandals.